Brendan Bartram: Attitudes to Modern Foreign Language

About Attitudes to Modern Foreign Language Learning. Drawing on the results of a tri-national comparative survey of secondary pupils' attitudes towards Modern Foreign Language Learning (MFL), this book illustrates both the importance and nature of learner attitudes and the contribution of comparative education to our understanding of educational issues.

Attitudes to Modern Foreign Language Learning: Insights

The declining interest in foreign languages in English-speaking countries has been attributed to negative societal attitudes and specific pupil attitudes and perceptions. While various initiatives have aimed to encourage language study, little research has systematically documented the relationship among perceptions, attitudes, and actually ...

Motivation and Motivating in the Foreign Language

As part of a project funded by the Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC), school students in the West of England were asked about their perceptions of the importance of modern foreign languages and about their reasons for liking and disliking them, particularly as this bore on the process of subject option choices. The results are compared with those of a similar project in the mid-1980s.

From bad to worse? Pupils' attitudes to modern foreign job-related attitudes entail differences among teachers within countries and within schools. Female teachers are less likely than male teachers to see teaching as the direct transmission of knowledge and are more likely to adopt structuring and student oriented practices as well as to co-operate more with colleagues.
