Process of protein folding Primary structure. The primary structure of a protein, its linear amino-acid sequence, determines its native conformation. The specific amino acid residues and their position in the polypeptide chain are the determining factors for which portions of the protein fold closely together and form its three-dimensional conformation.

Have you seen some of those folded book art/sculptures on etsy?! They are so beautiful and make the perfect gift. As it turns out they are also, while time consuming, easy to make. Online there are methods for using photoshop to create your own template, but I felt like there would be an easier way. I decided to set up a template in Illustrator.
