Budynas and J Nisbett Page reference 452-455, Table A-15 Page 1030 The first method is optimal for easy replacement, because a new standard 1/16" dowel can be inserted into the sleeve after a failure.

Hi all, I'm doing a FEA analysis for pin which subjected two double shear. I calculated the maximum shear stress of the pin using FEA and as well as manual calculation.

Smith suggested that misalignment during shear pin assembly associated with vibration might have promoted the pre-mature failure of the shear pin by fatigue . The maximum shear strength is derived from the maximum shear stress theory, which states that the material shear strength is 0.5 times that of the yield strength [5] .

Pins are manufactured from mild steel bars with diameters ranging from 9 to 330 mm. Pin connections are provided when hinged joints are required, i.e., for the connection where zero moment of free rotation is desired.
